PAPER 140 — THE ORDINATION OF THE TWELVE

140:0.1 Just before noon on Sunday, January 12, A.D. 27, Jesus called the apostles together for their ordination as public preachers of the gospel of the kingdom. The twelve were expecting to be called almost any day; so this morning they did not go out far from the shore to fish. Several of them were lingering near the shore repairing their nets and tinkering with their fishing paraphernalia.

140:0.2 As Jesus started down the seashore calling the apostles, he first hailed Andrew and Peter, who were fishing near the shore; next he signaled to James and John, who were in a boat near by, visiting with their father, Zebedee, and mending their nets. Two by two he gathered up the other apostles, and when he had assembled all twelve, he journeyed with them to the highlands north of Capernaum,¹ where he proceeded to instruct them in preparation for their formal ordination.

140:0.3 For once all twelve of the apostles were silent; even Peter was in a reflective mood. At last the long-awaited-for hour had come! They were going apart with the Master to participate in some sort of solemn ceremony of personal consecration and collective dedication to the sacred work of representing their Master in the proclamation of the coming of his Father's kingdom.

1 . P R E L I M I N A R Y I N S T R U C T I O N

140:1.1 Before the formal ordination service Jesus spoke to the twelve as they were seated about him: “My brethren, this hour of the kingdom has come. I have brought you apart here with me to present you to the Father as ambassadors of the kingdom. Some of you heard me speak of this kingdom in the synagogue when you first were called. Each of you has learned more about the Father’s kingdom since you have been with me working in the cities around about the Sea of Galilee. But just now I have something more to tell you concerning this kingdom.

[And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion,

140:1.2 “The new kingdom which my Father is about to set up in the hearts of his earth children is to be an everlasting dominion.²

which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed (Dan. 7:14).]

[And he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end (Lk. 1:33).]

There shall be no end of this rule of my Father in the hearts of those who desire to do his divine will.

I declare to you that my Father is not the God of Jew or gentile.

[And they shall come from the east, and from the west, and from the north, and from the south, and shall sit down in the kingdom of God (Lk. 13:29).]

Many shall come from the east and from the west to sit down with us in the Father’s kingdom, while many of the children of Abraham will refuse to enter this new brotherhood of the rule of the Father’s spirit in the hearts of the children of men.

140:1.3 “The power of this kingdom shall consist, not in the strength of armies nor in the might of riches, but rather in the glory of the divine spirit that shall come to teach the minds and rule the hearts of the reborn citizens of this heavenly kingdom, the sons of God. This is the brotherhood of love wherein righteousness reigns, and whose battle cry shall be:

[Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men (Lk. 2:14).]

Peace on earth and good will to all men.

This kingdom, which you are so soon to go forth proclaiming, is the desire of the good men of all ages, the hope of all the earth, and the fulfillment of the wise promises of all the prophets.

140:1.4 “But for you, my children, and for all others who would follow you into this kingdom, there is set a severe test. Faith alone will pass you through its portals, but you must bring forth the fruits of my Father’s spirit if you would continue to ascend in the progressive life of the divine fellowship.

Verily, verily, I say to you,

[Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven;

not every one who says, ‘Lord, Lord,’ shall enter the kingdom of heaven;

but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven (Matt. 7:21).]

but rather he who does the will of my Father who is in heaven.

140:1.5 “Your message to the world shall be:

[But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness;

Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you (Matt. 7:33).]

and in finding these, all other things essential to eternal survival shall be secured therewith.

[And being asked by the Pharisees, when the kingdom of God cometh, he answered them and said, The kingdom of God cometh not with observation:

neither shall they say, Lo, here! or, There!

for lo, the kingdom of God is within you (Lk. 17:20-21).]

[43 But it is not so among you: whosoever would become great among you, shall be your minister:

44 and whosoever would be first among you, shall be servant of all (Mk. 10:43-44, ARV).]

[Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ (Gal. 4:7).]

[So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand.

Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass away, till all be fulfilled (Lk. 21:31-32).]

[And then shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory (Lk. 21:27).]

And now would I make it plain to you that this kingdom of my Father will not come with an outward show of power or with unseemly demonstration.

You are not to go hence in the proclamation of the kingdom, saying, 'it is here' or 'it is there,' for this kingdom of which you preach is God within you.

140:1.6 "Whosoever would become great in my Father's kingdom shall become a minister to all;

and whosoever would be first among you, let him become the server of his brethren.

But when you are once truly received as citizens in the heavenly kingdom, you are no longer servants but sons, sons of the living God.

And so shall this kingdom progress in the world until it shall break down every barrier and bring all men to know my Father and believe in the saving truth which I have come to declare.

Even now is the kingdom at hand, and some of you will not die until you have seen the reign of God come in great power.

140:1.7 “And this which your eyes now behold, this small beginning of twelve commonplace men, shall multiply and grow until eventually the whole earth shall be filled with the praise of my Father. And it will not be so much by the words you speak as by the lives you live that men will know you have been with me and have learned of the realities of the kingdom. And while I would lay no grievous burdens upon your minds, I am about to put upon your souls the solemn responsibility of representing me in the world when I shall presently leave you as I now represent my Father in this life which I am living in the flesh.” And when he had finished speaking, he stood up.

2. THE ORDINATION

140:2.1 Jesus now instructed the twelve mortals who had just listened to his declaration concerning the kingdom to kneel in a circle about him. Then the Master placed his hands upon the head of each apostle, beginning with Judas Iscariot and ending with Andrew. When he had blessed them, he extended his hands and prayed:

140:2.2 “My Father, I now bring to you these men, my messengers. From among our children on earth I have chosen these twelve to go forth to represent me as I came forth to represent you. Love them and be with them as you have loved and been with me. And now, my Father, give these men wisdom as I place all the affairs of the coming kingdom in their hands. And I would, if it is your will, tarry on earth a time to help them in their labors for the kingdom.

And again, my Father, I thank you for these men, and I commit them to your keeping while I go on to finish the work you have given me to do.”

140:2.3 When Jesus had finished praying, the apostles remained each man bowed in his place. And it was many minutes before even Peter dared lift up his eyes to look upon the Master. One by one they embraced Jesus, but no man said aught. A great silence pervaded the place while a host of celestial beings looked down upon this solemn and sacred scene—the Creator of a universe placing the affairs of the divine brotherhood of man under the direction of human minds.

3. THE ORDINATION SERMON³

140:3.1 Then Jesus spoke, saying: “Now that you are ambassadors of my Father’s kingdom, you have thereby become a class of men separate and distinct from all other men on earth. You are not now as men among men but as the enlightened citizens of another and heavenly country among the ignorant creatures of this dark world.⁴ It is not enough that you live as you were before this hour, but henceforth must you live as those who have tasted the glories of a better life and have been sent back to earth as ambassadors of the Sovereign of that new and better world. Of the teacher more is expected than of the pupil; of the master more is exacted than of the servant. Of the citizens of the heavenly kingdom more is required than of the citizens of the earthly rule.

Some of the things which I am about to say to you may seem hard, but you have elected to represent me in the world even as I now represent the Father; and as my agents on earth you will be obligated to abide by those teachings and practices which are reflective of my ideals of mortal living on the worlds of space, and which I exemplify in my earth life of revealing the Father who is in heaven.

140:3.2 “I send you forth to proclaim liberty to the spiritual captives, joy to those in the bondage of fear, and to heal the sick in accordance with the will of my Father in heaven.

II: AN EXPERIMENTAL FAITH (Ligon 24)

Happy are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.—Matthew 5:3. (L 29)

Happy are they who hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled.—Matthew 5:6. (L 40)

Happy are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth.—Matthew 5:5. (L 44)

Happy are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.—Matthew 5:8. (L 52)

III: THE DYNAMIC OF FATHERLY LOVE (Ligon 63)

Happy are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted.—Matthew 5:4. (L 65)

When you find my children in distress, speak encouragingly to them, saying:

140:3.3 “Happy are the poor in spirit, the humble, for theirs are the treasures of the kingdom of heaven.⁵

140:3.4 “Happy are they who hunger and thirst for righteousness, for they shall be filled.⁶

140:3.5 “Happy are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth.⁷

140:3.6 “Happy are the pure in heart, for they shall see God.⁸

140:3.7 “And even so speak to my children these further words of spiritual comfort and promise:

140:3.8 “Happy are they who mourn, for they shall be comforted.⁹

Happy are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake.

Happy are you when men shall revile you and persecute you and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely.¹³

Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven: for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you.—Matthew 5:10-12. (L 83)

Rejoice and be exceedingly glad, for great is your reward in heaven.¹⁴

IV: THE SALT OF THE EARTH (Ligon 92)

140:3.12 “My brethren, as I send you forth,

Ye are the salt of the earth!

you are the salt of the earth,

salt with a saving savor.

But if the salt hath lost its savour, wherewithal shall it be salted?

But if this salt has lost its savor, wherewith shall it be salted?

It is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out and trodden under foot of men (L 92).

It is henceforth good for nothing but to be cast out and trodden under foot of men.

[contd] Ye are the light of the world!

140:3.13 “You are the light of the world.

A city set on a hill cannot be hid.

A city set upon a hill cannot be hid.

Neither do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick;

Neither do men light a candle and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick;

and it giveth light unto all that are in the house.

Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven.—Matthew 5:13-16. (L 92)

XIV: ORGANIZATION OF THE KINGDOM. (A Harmony of the Gospels 56)

§49. THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT. Matt., chs. 5, 6, 7, 8:1. Luke 6: 20-49.

Matt. 5:38 Ye have heard that it was said, An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth: 39 but I say unto you, Resist not him that is evil (ERV mg.: Or, evil):

but whosoever smitest thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also.

40 And if any man would go to law with thee, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloke also.

Luke 6:27 But I say unto you who hear,

Love your enemies, do good to them that hate you, 28 bless them that curse you, pray for them that despitefully use you.

31 And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise.

and it gives light to all who are in the house.

Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and be led to glorify your Father who is in heaven.

140:3.14 “I am sending you out into the world to represent me and to act as ambassadors of my Father’s kingdom, and as you go forth to proclaim the glad tidings, put your trust in the Father whose messengers you are.

Do not forcibly resist injustice; put not your trust in the arm of the flesh.

If your neighbor smites you on the right cheek, turn to him the other also.

Be willing to suffer injustice rather than to go to law among yourselves.

In kindness and with mercy minister to all who are in distress and in need.

140:3.15 “I say to you:

Love your enemies, do good to those who hate you, bless those who curse you, and pray for those who despitefully use you.

And whatsoever you believe that I would do to men, do you also to them.

Matt. 5:45 that ye may be sons of your Father who is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and the good, and sendeth rain on the just and the unjust.

Luke 6:35 But love your enemies, and do them good, and lend, never despairing; and your reward shall be great, and ye shall be sons of the Most High: for he is kind toward the unthankful and evil.

36 Be ye merciful, even as your Father is merciful.

Matt. 5:48 Ye therefore shall be perfect, as your heavenly Father is perfect.

7:1 Judge not, that ye be not judged.

3 And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye? 4 Or how will thou say to thy brother, Let me cast out the mote out of thine eye; and lo, the beam is in thine own eye?

5 Thou hypocrite, cast out first the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye.

140:3.16 "Your Father in heaven makes the sun to shine on the evil as well as upon the good;

likewise he sends rain on the just and the unjust.

You are the sons of God;

even more, you are now the ambassadors of my Father's kingdom.

Be merciful, even as God is merciful, and in the eternal future of the kingdom you shall be perfect, even as your heavenly Father is perfect.

140:3.17 "You are commissioned to save men, not to judge them.

At the end of your earth life you will all expect mercy; therefore do I require of you during your mortal life that you show mercy to all of your brethren in the flesh.

Make not the mistake of trying to pluck a mote out of your brother's eye when there is a beam in your own eye.

Having first cast the beam out of your own eye, you can the better see to cast the mote out of your brother's eye.

140:3.18 “Discern the truth clearly; live the righteous life fearlessly; and so shall you be my apostles and my Father’s ambassadors. You have heard it said:

[Footnote: Matt.15:14 And if the blind guide the blind, both shall fall into the pit. (§69)]

‘If the blind lead the blind, they both shall fall into the pit.’

If you would guide others into the kingdom, you must yourselves walk in the clear light of living truth.

In all the business of the kingdom I exhort you to show just judgment and keen wisdom.

6 Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast your pearls before the swine,

Present not that which is holy to dogs, neither cast your pearls before swine, lest haply they trample them under their feet, and turn and rend you.

lest they trample your gems under foot and turn to rend you.

15 Beware of false prophets, who come to you in sheep’s clothing,

140:3.19 “I warn you against false prophets who will come to you in sheep’s clothing, but inwardly are ravening wolves.

while on the inside they are as ravening wolves.

16 By their fruits ye shall know them.

By their fruits you shall know them.

Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?

Do men gather grapes from thorns or figs from thistles?

17 Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but the corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit.

Even so, every good tree brings forth good fruit, but the corrupt tree bears evil fruit.

18 A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.

A good tree cannot yield evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree produce good fruit.

19 Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire.

Every tree that does not bring forth good fruit is presently hewn down and cast into the fire.

In gaining an entrance into the kingdom of heaven,

[The official teachers of the law laid emphasis on outward observances; he puts the emphasis on inner motives (Fiske & Easton 35).]

it is the motive that counts.

My Father looks into the hearts of men and judges by their inner longings and their sincere intentions.

140:3.20 "In the great day of the kingdom judgment,

22 Many will say to me in that day,

many will say to me,

Lord, Lord, did we not prophesy by thy name, and by thy name cast out devils,

'Did we not prophesy in your name and by thy name do many mighty works?

and by your name do many wonderful works?'

23 And then will I profess unto them,

But I will be compelled to say to them,

I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity.

'I never knew you; depart from me you who are false teachers.'

But every one who hears this charge and sincerely executes his commission to represent me before men even as I have represented my Father to you, shall find an abundant entrance into my service and into the kingdom of the heavenly Father."

140:3.21 Never before had the apostles heard Jesus speak in this way, 28 And it came to pass, when Jesus ended these words, the multitudes were astonished at his teaching: 29 for he taught them as one having authority, and not as their scribes.

for he had talked to them as one having supreme authority.

Matt. 8:1 And when he was come down from the mountain, great multitudes followed him.

They came down from the mountain about sundown, but no man asked Jesus a question.

4. YOU ARE THE SALT OF THE EARTH

VIII: THE HEART OF THE GOSPEL (Fiske & Easton 51)

The teaching on the Sermon on the Mount is an utterly vital part of Jesus' message; it is the "rock" on which every spiritual house must be built. But the Sermon on the Mount is not "gospel" (F&E 51).

XVIII: THE ORDINATION OF THE TWELVE (Smith 157)

What then must be said of those precepts of our Lord? All difficulty vanishes the moment it is recognised that they were addressed, not to a promiscuous audience, but to the Apostles. Jesus was not enunciating a general code of Christian ethics but instructing the Twelve how they should comport themselves as the heralds of His Kingdom (S1 162).

IV: THE SALT OF THE EARTH (Ligon 92)

Ye are the salt of the earth!

140:4.1 The so-called "Sermon on the Mount" is not the gospel of Jesus.

It does contain much helpful instruction, but it was Jesus' ordination charge to the twelve apostles.

It was the Master's personal commission to those who were to go on preaching the gospel and aspiring to represent him in the world of men even as he was so eloquently and perfectly representative of his Father.

140:4.2 "You are the salt of the earth, salt with a saving savor."

But if the salt hath lost its savour, wherewithal shall it be salted?

It is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out and trodden under foot of men... — Matthew 5:13-[14]. (L 92)

It is henceforth good for nothing but to be cast out and trodden under foot of men."

In the Orient, during Jesus' day, [salt] was a scarce and valuable article.

140:4.3 In Jesus' time salt was precious.

Sometimes soldiers were paid in salt instead of coins.

It was even used for money.

The word salary had its origin in this fact (L 93).

The modern word "salary" is derived from salt.

Salt is valuable only when it is in the midst of things, making them taste better, preventing them from spoiling, or freeing them from corruption (L 93).

It makes other things more tasty, and thus it serves by being spent.

Furthermore, it was about the only available preservative. We still use it some for this purpose. Finally, it was used then, as now, for flavoring (L 93).

Salt not only flavors food, but it is also a preservative.

Ye are the light of the world!

140:4.4 "You are the light of the world.

A city set on a hill cannot be hid.

A city set on a hill cannot be hid.

Neither do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house.

Neither do men light a candle and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it gives light to all who are in the house.

Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven.—Matthew 5:[15]-16. (L 92)

Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and be led to glorify your Father who is in heaven."

As it was true of salt, so is it characteristic of light, that it rarely accomplishes its purpose by attracting attention to itself.

Our light should so shine as not to attract attention to self.

The light which glares in one's eyes blinds him, and does not light the way before him (L 94).

In whatever vocation a man chooses, he will shed some kind of light (L 94).

V: THE INTEGRATION OF CHARACTER (Ligon 106)

Such individuals, whose only claim to character is that they see no evil, hear no evil, and speak no evil, hardly typify what the psychologist understands by the term character (L 109).

Now let us turn to the second feature of character development, unselfishness (L 111).

If we look for the instinctive basis upon which strength of character can be built, we find it in the tendency to self-realization (L 110).

What is the difference between this good behavior motivated by fear of the consequences, and strong character? The difference is found in the word love (L 111).

140:4.5 While light dispels darkness, it can also be so "blinding" as to confuse and frustrate.

We are admonished to let our light so shine that our fellows will be guided into new and godly paths of enhanced living.

Even one's vocation can be utilized as an effective "reflector" for the dissemination of this light of life.

140:4.6 Strong characters are not derived from not doing wrong but rather from actually doing right.

Unselfishness is the badge of human greatness.

The highest levels of self-realization are attained by worship and service.

I: THE PSYCHOLOGY OF PERSONALITY AND THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT (Ligon 5)

It is probable that logical argument would never find a common ground for religious belief. Appeal to authority does not carry conviction outside the scope of that authority. Let us then turn to induction, scientific reasoning, to solve religious differences. This was the method taught by Jesus. “By their fruits, ye shall know them” (L 9-10).

Religion education has for its purpose the development of character and personality (L 11).

Repression is the characteristic result of one very common trend in religious education. This is the philosophy of negative morality.

[[Jesus] taught experimental faith. “Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire” (L 21).]

“Thou shalt not” is the one thing which most people connect with religion.

What is even more significant psychologically is the fact that the chief motivation used for securing this morality is shame; and shame regularly seems to be mentally unhealthy (L 11).

140:4.7 “By their fruits you shall know them.”

Personality is basically changeless; that which changes—grows—is the moral character.

The major error of modern religions is negativism.

The tree which bears no fruit is “hewn down and cast into the fire.”

Moral worth cannot be derived from mere repression—obeying the injunction

“Thou shalt not.”

Fear and shame are unworthy motivations for religious living.

Religion is valid only when it reveals the fatherhood of God and enhances the brotherhood of men.

All behavior is fundamentally an effort to discover satisfaction for one's appetites and urges, and expression for his abilities.... His system of values, likes and dislikes, fears, angers, and loves will grow out of this process. If, in the process of activity, an urge finds no immediate satisfaction, an emotion arises.... The sum total of all these emotional reactions to his environment is his real philosophy of life (L 13).

The emotional attitude is not in itself inherited. It is a learned response adopted to satisfy inherited urges. It can be changed if other means of satisfying these urges can be found. It is the instinctive urges that constitute the "human nature that cannot be changed" (L 14).

Briefly, integration is the condition of a personality in which all of the emotional attitudes are harmonious and mutually helpful, thus permitting all of one's natural energy to be directed toward one end (L 14).

[T]here is the so-called psychopathic personality.... Such a personality has no purpose, with the result that the desire for achievement is never satisfied. This results in unhappiness, and soon the individual finds that the various appetites conflict with one another and pull in opposite directions (L 15).

140:4.8 An effective philosophy of living is formed by a combination of cosmic insight and the total of one's emotional reactions to the social and economic environment.

Remember:

While inherited urges cannot be fundamentally modified, emotional responses to such urges can be changed;

therefore the moral nature can be modified, character can be improved.

In the strong character emotional responses are integrated and co-ordinated, and thus is produced a unified personality.

Deficient unification weakens the moral nature and engenders unhappiness.

The most universally recognized source of integration, and therefore of mental health, is a dominant purpose in life.... Behavior difficulties occur most frequently among those who have no such purpose (L 16).

[The Sermon on the Mount] has been thought of by some as a system of morals and ethics; a catalogue of the things which we ought to do, but leave undone; and the things we ought to leave undone, but often do. Actually it constitutes a powerful philosophy of life (L 18).

Jesus believed in an experimental faith.

Just what is meant by an experimental faith can be shown best by describing several types of faith. There is a faith which consists largely in intellectual assent.... Most commonly, such faith is based upon acceptance of authority (L 19).

Then, there is a type of faith which is credulity. It consists in the uncritical acceptance of some proposition (L 19).

II: AN EXPERIMENTAL FAITH (Ligon 24)

Learning consists in finding satisfactions for instinctive urges (L 25).

140:4.9 Without a worthy goal, life becomes aimless and unprofitable, and much unhappiness results.

Jesus' discourse at the ordination of the twelve constitutes a master philosophy of life.

Jesus exhorted his followers to exercise experiential faith.

He admonished them not to depend on mere intellectual assent, credulity, and established authority.

140:4.10 Education should be a technique of learning (discovering) the better methods of gratifying our natural and inherited urges,

It follows, then, that happiness consists in finding an ever attainable group of satisfactions for all of the instinctive urges (L 26).

One may go about the task of seeking happiness, then, in either of two ways. He may search for an environment which will satisfy his every wish. Such a quest is almost universally unsuccessful.... If one observes the people who are happy, and those who are unhappy, it will be obvious that those with and those without material advantages are found in both groups.

To assert that salaries, comforts, luxuries, and pleasure are of no concern, would be foolish. They are quite desirable, and are often the sources of opportunity (L 27).

XI: THE CHRISTIAN PERSONALITY (Ligon 334)

It has been pointed out that the fundamental motivation in human life is the desire to be a “complete man.”

“Be ye therefore perfect” is the most earnest prayer of every individual (L 335).

Then, teach the child that the universe is fatherly. Teach him that this principle of fatherliness is the great spiritual power of the universe (L 362).

and happiness is the resulting total of these enhanced techniques of emotional satisfactions.

Happiness is little dependent on environment, though pleasing surroundings may greatly contribute thereto.

140:4.11 Every mortal really craves to be a complete person, to be perfect even as the Father in heaven is perfect, and such attainment is possible because in the last analysis the “universe is truly fatherly.”

5. FATHERLY AND BROTHERLY LOVE

I: THE PSYCHOLOGY OF PERSONALITY AND THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT (Ligon 5)

Jesus did not teach brotherly love; he taught fatherly love (L 23).

[See 140:3.15, above.]

The common opinion that Jesus taught brotherly love, sets up many difficulties in his teachings. It is usually explained either as high idealism, not humanly possible, or as nothing more than high-sounding liturgy (L 22).

140:5.1 From the Sermon on the Mount to the discourse of the Last Supper, Jesus taught his followers to manifest fatherly love rather than brotherly love.

Brotherly love would love your neighbor as you love yourself, and that would be adequate fulfillment of the “golden rule.” But fatherly affection would require that you should love your fellow mortals as Jesus loves you.

140:5.2 Jesus loves mankind with a dual affection. He lived on earth as a twofold personality—human and divine. As the Son of God he loves man with a fatherly love—he is man’s Creator, his universe Father. As the Son of Man, Jesus loves mortals as a brother—he was truly a man among men.

140:5.3 Jesus did not expect his followers to achieve an impossible manifestation of brotherly love, but he did expect them to so strive to be like God—to be perfect even as the Father in heaven is perfect—that they could begin to look upon man as God looks upon his creatures and therefore could begin to love men as God loves them—to show forth the beginnings of a fatherly affection.

[F]atherliness consists of a group of characteristic attitudes toward others (L 23).

II: AN EXPERIMENTAL FAITH (Ligon 24)

To treat the Beatitudes psychologically, it is necessary to discuss them in a different order than that in which they are given in Matthew. Psychologically they fall into two groups. The first group consists in the attitudes of experimental faith.

It includes the poor in spirit,

those who hunger and thirst after righteousness,

the meek,

and the pure in heart.

The second group gives the characteristics of fatherly love.

In the course of these exhortations to the twelve apostles, Jesus sought to reveal this new concept of fatherly love as it is related to certain emotional attitudes concerned in making numerous environmental social adjustments.

140:5.4 The Master introduced this momentous discourse by calling attention to four faith attitudes as the prelude to the subsequent portrayal of his four transcendent and supreme reactions of fatherly love in contrast to the limitations of mere brotherly love.

140:5.5 He first talked about those who were poor in spirit,

hungered after righteousness,

endured meekness,

and who were pure in heart.

Such spirit-discerning mortals could be expected to attain such levels of divine selflessness as to be able to attempt the amazing exercise of fatherly affection;

It includes those who mourn,
 the merciful,
 the peacemakers, and those who are persecuted for righteousness' sake. These eight traits constitute the Christian personality (L 28).

[contd] Whenever one attaches fear or anger to portions of his environment, he is increasing his unhappiness and weakening his personality. When he attaches faith or love to them, he increases his happiness and strengthens his personality (L 28).

The Sermon on the Mount begins with the word happy (L 24).

Happy are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.—Matthew 5:3. (L 29)

[contd] To the young child, happiness seems to consist in the satisfaction of whatever appetite or urge happens to be dominant at the moment.... He has no greater vision of happiness than his immediate pleasure (L 29).

that even as mourners
 they would be empowered to show mercy, promote peace,
 and endure persecutions, and throughout all of these trying situations to love even unlovely mankind with a fatherly love.

A father's affection can attain levels of devotion that immeasurably transcend a brother's affection.

140:5.6 The faith and the love of these beatitudes strengthen moral character and create happiness.

Fear and anger weaken character and destroy happiness.

This momentous sermon started out upon the note of happiness.

140:5.7 1. "Happy are the poor in spirit—the humble."

To a child, happiness is the satisfaction of immediate pleasure craving.

[contd] The audience to which Jesus spoke, had much the same general ideas about happiness, that most of us have today. They believed that happiness was highly correlated with wealth (L 29).

Jesus' best illustration of this attitude is found in the parable of the Pharisee and the publican.

The Pharisee, in his own mind, was spiritually rich. He is described as praying to himself, not to God.

The publican had no doubt as to his own spiritual poverty. He, therefore, prayed to God (L 31).

One was humble, the other haughty (L 31).

It has been shown that the healthy personality is integrated about some goal or purpose. But the rich in spirit are satisfied with things as they are. It is not likely, that one who is satisfied with things as they are, will be a man of strong purpose (L 33).

When Jesus said that the poor in spirit are happy, because "theirs is the kingdom of heaven"; observe that this is not a promise of some future material reward, but a statement of a present condition (L 35).

The adult is willing to sow seeds of self-denial in order to reap subsequent harvests of augmented happiness.

In Jesus' times and since, happiness has all too often been associated with the idea of the possession of wealth.

In the story of the Pharisee and the publican praying in the temple, the one felt rich in spirit—egotistical;

the other felt "poor in spirit"— humble.

One was self-sufficient; the other was teachable and truth-seeking.

The poor in spirit seek for goals of spiritual wealth—for God.

And such seekers after truth do not have to wait for rewards in a distant future;

they are rewarded now.

Once, when the Pharisees asked [Jesus] when the kingdom would come, he answered, “The kingdom of God cometh not with observation: Neither shall they say, Lo here! or, lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is within you” (L 36).

Happy are they who hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled.—Matthew 5:6. (L 40)

It is obvious that one will not hunger and thirst for righteousness unless he feels a lack of it (L 40-41).

If one stops eating, his body ceases to be hungry. After three days of fasting, he no longer experiences any craving for food (L 40).

It may be that our long period of fasting with respect to righteousness has made us forget how to be hungry for it (L 41).

To [many men], the word work means the opposite of pleasure. But the man who finds a task which challenges the best in him, gets his greatest pleasure in his work (L 41).

They find the kingdom of heaven within their own hearts, and they experience such happiness now.

140:5.8 2. “Happy are they who hunger and thirst for righteousness, for they shall be filled.”

Only those who feel poor in spirit will ever hunger for righteousness.

Only the humble seek for divine strength and crave spiritual power.

But it is most dangerous to knowingly engage in spiritual fasting in order to improve one’s appetite for spiritual endowments.

Physical fasting becomes dangerous after four or five days; one is apt to lose all desire for food.

Prolonged fasting, either physical or spiritual, tends to destroy hunger.

140:5.9 Experiential righteousness is a pleasure, not a duty.

To Jesus, righteousness consisted of the laws which govern the spiritual and social universe. A study of his teachings will show that his conception of these laws was, that they were based on the positive dynamic of love and not on negative ethics.

The negative morality concept of the older Judaism, however, was so widespread that the word righteousness still carries to most people the idea, that the righteous man is the man who does no wrong.

It is difficult to imagine being hungry and thirsty for learning the things one should not do (L 42).

The attitudes of poverty of spirit and especially of hungering and thirsting for righteousness are relatively easy to teach the child (L 44).

Happy are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth.—Matthew 5:5. (L 44)

The timid soul has come to be known as the meek man who submits to the wishes of other individuals, because he is afraid to resist them. This notion of meekness is far from the attitude of mind described in Jesus' teaching (L 45).

Jesus' righteousness is a dynamic love—fatherly-brotherly affection.

It is not the negative or thou-shalt-not type of righteousness.

How could one ever hunger for something negative—something “not to do”?

140:5.10 It is not so easy to teach a child mind these first two of the beatitudes, but the mature mind should grasp their significance.

140:5.11 3. “Happy are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth.”

Genuine meekness has no relation to fear.

It is rather an attitude of man co-operating with God—

When Jesus faced the inevitable result of his ministry, as he prayed in the Garden of Gethsemane, he gave a magnificent demonstration of meekness. “If it be possible, let this cup pass from me; but, not my will but Thine be done” (L 45).

“Your will be done.”

Moses has been frequently described as the meekest of men.... Certainly, the people whom he led out of Egypt, still slaves at heart, would be a trial to any man.... Yet, with the exception of one instance, Moses was patient with them, never losing his faith that they were worth saving (L 45-46).

It embraces patience and forbearance

Meekness can be defined as the unshakable faith that the universe is lawful. Christian meekness is the faith that the universe is fatherly (L 46).

and is motivated by an unshakable faith in a lawful and friendly universe.

Meekness is not an easy attitude to learn. There are many temptations to rebel against the working of spiritual laws. It is a characteristic of human nature to want laws set aside, when one is facing the consequences of breaking them (L 47).

It masters all temptations to rebel against the divine leading.

Jesus was the ideal meek man of Urantia,

It is the meek who realize that the men who seem to be dying on a cross are really only beginning to live; that they are the people who will eventually inherit the earth.... Jesus has come nearer inheriting the earth than any one else, and he probably never owned property (L 50).

and he inherited a vast universe.

Happy are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.—Matthew 5:8. (L 52)

140:5.12 4. “Happy are the pure in heart, for they shall see God.”

The pure in heart are thought to be those who do no evil. Notice, however, that the word purity is more positive than negative (L 52).

Spiritual purity is not a negative quality,

Suspicion and distrust are the characteristic responses of many people to their social contacts.... This is not the attitude of the pure in heart (L 53).

[[Sex] has occupied so prominent a place in the problem of character, that in the minds of many people, moral character and sexual purity are synonymous terms (L 124).]

Purity of heart is first and foremost a faith in the potential goodness of one's fellow men (L 53).

What man has not felt the power which comes from the faith of his mother? (L 53)

The answer to the second objection [against developing the habit of having faith in all men] is found in the fact that an intelligent faith does not condone evil, but it sees in the forces which produce evil, the potential strength for good (L 54).

One may become a cynic.... The fact is that the man who is pure in heart is happier and more wholesome than one who has lost his faith in others (L 55).

[contd] There is a second element in this characteristic of being pure in heart. This second element is singleness of purpose (L 55).

The pure in heart, then, are always looking for the best in men (L 57).

except that it does lack suspicion and revenge.

In discussing purity, Jesus did not intend to deal exclusively with human sex attitudes.

He referred more to that faith which man should have in his fellow man;

that faith which a parent has in his child, and which enables him to love his fellows even as a father would love them.

A father's love need not pamper, and it does not condone evil,

but it is always anticynical.

Fatherly love has singleness of purpose, and it always looks for the best in man;

No better example of the pure in heart could be found than the good father or mother. The true parent will find all other phases of his life subordinated to the welfare of his child (L 57).

Many have believed that they saw God. Jesus said that only the pure in heart really see Him. We see now what this means. Seeing God is gaining an insight into the spiritual law. Who is likely to do this except he who has made it his dominating purpose in life? (L 58-59)

Finally, let us see how children can be educated to be pure in heart (L 59).

Every child is instinctively trusting (L 59).

Indeed, it is not so much giving [the child a faith in others], as keeping him from losing it (L 59).

There are two ways in which a child often does lose this faith. In the first place, the parents, in an effort to protect him from imposition, teach him to be suspicious of others (L 59).

Tell him of heroes who have been pure in heart (L 60).

that is the attitude of a true parent.

140:5.13 To see God—by faith—means to acquire true spiritual insight.

And spiritual insight enhances Adjuster guidance, and these in the end augment God-consciousness.

And when you know the Father, you are confirmed in the assurance of divine sonship, and you can increasingly love each of your brothers in the flesh, not only as a brother—with brotherly love—but also as a father—with fatherly affection.

140:5.14 It is easy to teach this admonition even to a child.

Children are naturally trustful, and parents should see to it that they do not lose that simple faith.

In dealing with children, avoid all deception and refrain from suggesting suspicion.

Wisely help them to choose their heroes

Another important task in making the child pure in heart is helping him to find the right life work (L 60).

III: THE DYNAMIC OF FATHERLY LOVE (Ligon 63)

140:5.15 And then Jesus went on to instruct his followers in the realization of the chief purpose of all human struggling—perfection—even divine attainment. Always he admonished them:

[contd] Man is not saved by faith alone. The Christian personality must be devoted to the service of humanity. “Be ye therefore perfect as your Father” (L 63).

“Be you perfect, even as your Father in heaven is perfect.”

He did not exhort the twelve to love their neighbors as they loved themselves. That would have been a worthy achievement; it would have indicated the achievement of brotherly love.

He admonished the disciples, “Love one another as I have loved you.”

He rather admonished his apostles to love men as he had loved them— to love with a fatherly as well as a brotherly affection.

His attitude toward the Twelve was always more like that of a father than of a brother (L 64).

The remaining four Beatitudes describe the characteristics of fatherliness (L 63).

And he illustrated this by pointing out four supreme reactions of fatherly love:

Happy are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted.—Matthew 5:4. (L 65)

140:5.16 1. “Happy are they who mourn, for they shall be comforted.”

[contd] Common sense would never have suggested to men that happiness could come from mourning (L 65).

So-called common sense or the best of logic would never suggest that happiness could be derived from mourning.

The word used by Matthew does not refer to outward mourning (L 65).

But Jesus did not refer to outward or ostentatious mourning.

Jesus referred to a much deeper feeling. [Etc.] (L 65)

There is a common tradition, especially among men, which is vicious to its very core. It has no official name, but it seems to be characteristically American, and perhaps can best be called the “he-man” philosophy. As soon as he can understand words, every boy hears the manly assertion, “Boys don’t cry!” (L 69)

In his efforts to become a real “he-man,” a boy who does not cry, he is forced to become crude, thoughtless, callous, and in fact almost emotionally impotent, having repressed some of his finest qualities (L 69).

We are, of course, anxious for our sons to be courageous and able to endure hardship, not cowardly and weak, but we have used the wrong methods (L 69).

If we look through the Bible and list the characters who mourned, we find such names as these: Moses, Abraham, Samuel, David, Elijah, Jeremiah, Isaiah, Amos, Hosea, Jesus, Peter, and Paul.

Among those who would answer our description of the real “he-man” would be Samson and Goliath (L 69-70).

He alluded to an emotional attitude of tenderheartedness.

It is a great error to teach boys and young men that it is unmanly to show tenderness or otherwise to give evidence of emotional feeling or physical suffering.

Sympathy is a worthy attribute of the male as well as the female.

It is not necessary to be calloused in order to be manly.

This is the wrong way to create courageous men.

The world’s great men have not been afraid to mourn.

Moses, the mourner,

was a greater man than either Samson or Goliath.

[See 140:5.11, above.]

Moses was a superb leader, but he was also a man of meekness.

Quite apart from any sense of duty or ethical standards, this attitude of being sensitive to the needs of others is essential to mental health.... If parents teach their children this Beatitude they will assure them of a high measure of happiness (L 71).

Being sensitive and responsive to human need creates genuine and lasting happiness, while such kindly attitudes safeguard the soul from the destructive influences of anger, hate, and suspicion.

Jesus described [the active side of fatherly love] in three Beatitudes. The first of these is,

Happy are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy.—Matthew 5:7. (L 72)

140:5.17 2. "Happy are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy."

[contd] The word which Jesus translated mercy is one rich in meaning throughout the Old Testament. Someone has described it as "the perfection of that mystical relation of one personality to another which is the highest of all possible grades of friendship" (L 72).

Mercy here denotes the height and depth and breadth of the truest friendship—

The same Hebrew word is sometimes interpreted as righteousness, which is another evidence that righteousness in the Christian era is more of the quality of loving-kindness than of cold justice or negative morality (L 72).

loving-kindness.

[contd] Mercy is not a passive process, but one that expresses itself in action. Its simplest definition would be the prevention of suffering in others, whether physical or spiritual. Parents try to predict the hard knocks their children may meet, save them from as many as possible, and give them the strength to meet the others.

The fatherliness of God, exemplified in this Beatitude, is not characteristic of the Old Testament teachings (L 72).

Consider how frequently we are deeply offended at some injustice done to us. We usually find it difficult to forgive even when amends are made. A parent, however, would have no difficulty forgiving a child any number of offences (L 73).

The impulse to help those who are suffering is instinctive (L 75).

Happy are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the sons of God.—Matthew 5:9. (L 76)

[contd] In this Beatitude Jesus was preaching unpopular doctrine. The Jews were under the heel of the Roman Empire.... They were looking for military leaders, not peacemakers (L 76).

In the minds of most of us peace is simply lack of struggle.... However, if we search the teachings of Jesus to determine what he meant by peace, we can hardly attach this negative connotation to his words.

Mercy sometimes may be passive, but here it is active and dynamic—supreme fatherliness.

A loving parent experiences little difficulty in forgiving his child, even many times.

And in an unspoiled child the urge to relieve suffering is natural.

Children are normally kind and sympathetic when old enough to appreciate actual conditions.

140:5.18 3. “Happy are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the sons of God.”

Jesus’ hearers were longing for military deliverance, not for peacemakers.

But Jesus’ peace is not of the pacific and negative kind.

Just before he went to Gethsemane and Calvary, facing the certainty of his own death and the probable discouraging behavior of his disciples, he said,

“Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you.” (L 76)

In his words, “Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid,” he said nothing of external things, but of inner attitudes (L 76-77).

There are three kinds of conflict which challenge the peacemaker.... All three of them are essentially one, however, inner conflict (L 77).

These inner conflicts can be classified in three groups: lust, fears, and angers. These will be recognized as the powerful disintegrating conditions which arise out of conflict. Everyone knows them as the great sources of unhappiness (L 78).

Then there are the conflicts between man and his social environment.... Lust expresses itself either in out-and-out greed or in the disguise which men call “individual initiative.” Social forms of fear are numerous (L 78).

Anger expresses itself in “standing up for one’s own rights,” and in protesting vigorously about insignificant matters because of “the principle of the thing” (L 78).

Finally there are the conflicts between larger social groups: economic strife, race hatred, class bitterness, and political antagonism between nations (L 78).

In the face of trials and persecutions he said,

“My peace I leave with you.”

“Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid.”

This is the peace that prevents ruinous conflicts.

Personal peace integrates personality.

Social peace prevents fear, greed, and anger.

Political peace prevents race antagonisms, national suspicions, and war.

[Compare L 81-83.]

Team play and being a good loser are utterly impossible for children of seven or eight years of age to learn (L 82).

“For whosoever will save his life shall lose it: but whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it.” ... It is this phase of strong character which receives the emphasis in the last of these great Beatitudes (L 83).

[contd] Happy are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

Happy are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake.

Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven: for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you.— Matthew 5:10-12. (L 83)

[contd] It is significant that Jesus follows peace with persecution. After the Last Supper, where he had given his peace to his disciples, his persecution began and so did theirs (L 83).

[See L 84, where Ligon gives “numerous examples of those who rejoice even in suffering.”]

“Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends.”

Yet a father is quite willing to lay down his life for his son (L 85).

Peacemaking is the cure of distrust and suspicion.

140:5.19 Children can easily be taught to function as peacemakers.

They enjoy team activities; they like to play together.

Said the Master at another time:

“Whosoever will save his life shall lose it, but whosoever will lose his life shall find it.”

140:5.20 4. “Happy are they who are persecuted for righteousness' sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

Happy are you when men shall revile you and persecute you and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely.

Rejoice and be exceedingly glad, for great is your reward in heaven.”

140:5.21 So often persecution does follow peace.

But young people and brave adults never shun difficulty or danger.

“Greater love has no man than to lay down his life for his friends.”

And a fatherly love can freely do all these things—things which brotherly love can hardly encompass.

History offers abundant evidence that progress is rarely made except through the suffering of some individual or nation, usually of both (L 85).

And progress has always been the final harvest of persecution.

Human nature responds to the challenge of courage (L 86).

140:5.22 Children always respond to the challenge of courage.

[[T]he majority of normal youths are always willing to “take a dare” (William S. Sadler, M.D., Theory and Practice of Psychiatry [1936], p. 372.)

Youth is ever willing to “take a dare.”

There are many ways in which this trait can be instilled into the child. However, if this attitude toward vicarious sacrifice is to be learned, it must be done through love coupled with this innate sense of courage (L 86).

And every child should early learn to sacrifice.

140:5.23 And so it is revealed that the beatitudes of the Sermon on the Mount are based on

In this brief exposition of the Beatitudes we have listed eight traits which constitute the Christian personality. Four of them seem to be attributes of a type of faith, which has been described as an experimental faith.

faith

The other four are descriptive of the sort of love which Jesus urged his followers to have for one another (L 89).

and love

Many people think of these Beatitudes as ethical duties to be performed.... Actually, they are very far from being ethical codes of conduct (L 89).

and not on law—ethics and duty.

I: THE PSYCHOLOGY OF PERSONALITY AND THE SERMON
ON THE MOUNT (Ligon 5)

Fathers are constantly “returning good for evil” (L 23).

140:5.24 Fatherly love delights in returning good for evil—doing good in retaliation for injustice.

6. THE EVENING OF THE ORDINATION

140:6.1 Sunday evening, on reaching the home of Zebedee from the highlands north of Capernaum, Jesus and the twelve partook of a simple meal. Afterward, while Jesus went for a walk along the beach, the twelve talked among themselves. After a brief conference, while the twins built a small fire to give them warmth and more light, Andrew went out to find Jesus, and when he had overtaken him, he said: “Master, my brethren are unable to comprehend what you have said about the kingdom. We do not feel able to begin this work until you have given us further instruction. I have come to ask you to join us in the garden and help us to understand the meaning of your words.” And Jesus went with Andrew to meet with the apostles.

140:6.2 When he had entered the garden, he gathered the apostles around him and taught them further, saying: “You find it difficult to receive my message because you would build the new teaching directly upon the old, but I declare that you must be reborn. You must start out afresh as little children and be willing to trust my teaching and believe in God. The new gospel of the kingdom cannot be made to conform to that which is. You have wrong ideas of the Son of Man and his mission on earth.

§49. THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT.
Matt., chs. 5, 6, 7, [8:1]. Luke 6: 20-49.

Matt. 5:17 Think not that I came to destroy the law or the prophets:

I came not to destroy, but to fulfil.

[Moses legislated as a minister of state, who transmits the will of a Greater than himself. It was from Another that he received the tables of stone. But Jesus, in His own royal Person, wrote His law upon the living tablets of men's hearts ... (Wilson 152).]

20 For I say unto you, that except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven.

[In the strictly religious sense of the word, the Jews divided "righteousness" into three acts—almsgiving, prayer, and fasting (Fiske & Easton 37).]

21 Ye have heard that it was said to them of old time,

Thou shalt not kill; and whosoever shall kill shall be in danger of the judgement:

But do not make the mistake of thinking that I have come to set aside the law and the prophets;

I have not come to destroy but to fulfil, to enlarge and illuminate.

I come not to transgress the law but rather to write these new commandments on the tablets of your hearts.

140:6.3 "I demand of you a righteousness that shall exceed the righteousness of those who seek to obtain the Father's favor by almsgiving, prayer, and fasting.

If you would enter the kingdom, you must have a righteousness that consists in love, mercy, and truth—the sincere desire to do the will of my Father in heaven."

140:6.4 Then said Simon Peter: "Master, if you have a new commandment, we would hear it. Reveal the new way to us." Jesus answered Peter:

"You have heard it said by those who teach the law:

'You shall not kill; that whosoever kills shall be subject to judgment.'

22 but I say unto you, that every one who is angry with his brother shall be in danger of the judgement; and whosoever shall say to his brother, Raca, shall be in danger of the council; and whosoever shall say, Thou fool, shall be in danger of the hell of fire.

27 Ye have heard that it was said, Thou shall not commit adultery:

28 but I say unto you, that every one that looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart.

31 It was said also, Whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement:

but I say unto you,

But I look beyond the act to uncover the motive.

I declare to you that every one who is angry with his brother is in danger of condemnation.

He who nurses hatred in his heart and plans vengeance in his mind stands in danger of judgment. You must judge your fellows by their deeds; the Father in heaven judges by the intent.

140:6.5 “You have heard the teachers of the law say, ‘You shall not commit adultery.’

But I say to you that every man who looks upon a woman with intent to lust after her has already committed adultery with her in his heart.

You can only judge men by their acts, but my Father looks into the hearts of his children and in mercy adjudges them in accordance with their intents and real desires.”

140:6.6 Jesus was minded to go on discussing the other commandments when James Zebedee interrupted him, asking: “Master, what shall we teach the people regarding divorcement? Shall we allow a man to divorce his wife as Moses has directed?”

And when Jesus heard this question, he said:

that every one that putteth away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, maketh her an adulteress: and whosoever shall marry her when she is put away committeth adultery.

VII: THE CHRISTIAN ETHIC (Fiske & Easton 43)

[Jesus] declined to advocate specific reforms;

he did something better, he set forth principles which made reform inevitable.

Had he been a legislator dealing specifically with local conditions of his own day, his teaching would have been of little value when that day had passed (F&E 47).

§110. CONCERNING DIVORCE. Matt. 19:3-12. Mark 10:2-12.

Matt. 19:8 He saith unto them,

Moses because of the hardness of your hearts suffered you to put away your wives:

but from the beginning it was not so.
[Note: See 167:5.4.]

“I have not come to legislate but to enlighten.

I have come not to reform the kingdoms of this world but rather to establish the kingdom of heaven.

It is not the will of the Father that I should yield to the temptation to teach you rules of government, trade, or social behavior, which, while they might be good for today, would be far from suitable for the society of another age.

I am on earth solely to comfort the minds, liberate the spirits, and save the souls of men.

But I will say, concerning this question of divorcement, that,

while Moses looked with favor upon such things, it was not so in the days of Adam and in the Garden.”

140:6.7 After the apostles had talked among themselves for a short time, Jesus went on to say: “Always must you recognize the two viewpoints of all mortal conduct—the human and the divine; the ways of the flesh and the way of the spirit; the estimate of time and the viewpoint of eternity.” And though the twelve could not comprehend all that he taught them, they were truly helped by this instruction.

140:6.8 And then said Jesus: “But you will stumble over my teaching because you are wont to interpret my message literally; you are slow to discern the spirit of my teaching. Again must you remember that you are my messengers; you are beholden to live your lives as I have in spirit lived mine. You are my personal representatives; but do not err in expecting all men to live as you do in every particular.

Also must you remember that

[And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd (Jn. 10:16).]

I have sheep not of this flock, and that I am beholden to them also, to the end that I must provide for them the pattern of doing the will of God while living the life of the mortal nature.”

§49. THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT.
Matt., chs. 5, 6, 7, [8:1]. Luke 6: 20-49.

140:6.9 Then asked Nathaniel: “Master, shall we give no place to justice?”

Matt. 5:38 Ye have heard that it was said, An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth:

The law of Moses says, ‘An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth.’

What shall we say?”

[See 140:3.14 and 140:5.24, above.]

And Jesus answered: "You shall return good for evil.

My messengers must not strive with men, but be gentle toward all. Measure for measure shall not be your rule. The rulers of men may have such laws, but not so in the kingdom; mercy always shall determine your judgments and love your conduct. And if these are hard sayings, you can even now turn back. If you find the requirements of apostleship too hard, you may return to the less rigorous pathway of discipleship."

140:6.10 On hearing these startling words, the apostles drew apart by themselves for a while, but they soon returned, and Peter said: "Master, we would go on with you; not one of us would turn back. We are fully prepared to pay the extra price; we will drink the cup. We would be apostles, not merely disciples."

140:6.11 When Jesus heard this, he said:

[Then said Jesus unto his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me (Matt. 16:24).]

"Be willing, then, to take up your responsibilities and follow me.

6:1 Take heed that ye do not your righteousness before men, to be seen of them: else ye have no reward with your Father who is in heaven.

Do your good deeds in secret;

when you give alms, let not the left hand know what the right hand does.

6 But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thine inner chamber, and having shut thy door, pray to thy Father who is in secret, and the Father who seeth in secret shall recompense thee.

And when you pray, go apart by yourselves

SOURCE OR PARALLEL

URANTIA PAPER 140

7 And in praying use not vain repetitions, as the Gentiles do: for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking.

and use not vain repetitions and meaningless phrases.

Always remember that

8 Be not therefore like unto them: for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of, before ye ask him.

the Father knows what you need even before you ask him.

16 Moreover when ye fast, be not as the hypocrites, of a sad countenance: for they disfigure their faces, that they may be seen of men to fast. Verily I say unto you, They have received their reward.

And be not given to fasting with a sad countenance to be seen by men.

As my chosen apostles, now set apart for the service of the kingdom, 19 Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon the earth, where moth and rust consume, and where thieves break through and steal:

lay not up for yourselves treasures on earth,

but by your unselfish service

20 but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth consume, and where thieves do not break through nor steal:

lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven,

21 for where thy treasure is, there will thy heart be also.

for where your treasures are, there will your hearts be also.

22 The lamp of the body is the eye:

140:6.12 "The lamp of the body is the eye;

if therefore thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light.

if, therefore, your eye is generous, your whole body will be full of light.

23 But if thine eye be evil, thy whole body shall be full of darkness.

But if your eye is selfish, the whole body will be filled with darkness.

If therefore the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is the darkness!

If the very light which is in you is turned to darkness, how great is that darkness!"

140:6.13 And then Thomas asked Jesus if they should “continue having everything in common.” Said the Master: “Yes, my brethren, I would that we should live together as one understanding family. You are intrusted with a great work, and I crave your undivided service.

You know that it has been well said:

‘No man can serve two masters.’

24 No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to one, and despise the other.

Ye cannot serve God and mammon.

You cannot sincerely worship God and at the same time wholeheartedly serve mammon.

Having now enlisted unreservedly in the work of the kingdom,

25 Therefore I say unto you, Be not anxious for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink;

be not anxious for your lives; much less be concerned with what you shall eat or what you shall drink;

nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than the food, and the body than the raiment?

nor yet for your bodies, what clothing you shall wear.

Already have you learned that willing hands and earnest hearts shall not go hungry.

And now, when you prepare to devote all of your energies to the work of the kingdom, be assured that 32 For after all these things the Gentiles seek; for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things.

the Father will not be unmindful of your needs.

33 But seek ye first his kingdom, and his righteousness;

Seek first the kingdom of God, and when you have found entrance thereto, and all these things shall be added unto you.

34 Be not therefore anxious for the morrow: for the morrow will be anxious for itself.

Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.

all things needful shall be added to you.

Be not, therefore, unduly anxious for the morrow.

Sufficient for the day is the trouble thereof.”

140:6.14 When Jesus saw they were disposed to stay up all night to ask questions, he said to them: “My brethren, you are earthen vessels; it is best for you to go to your rest so as to be ready for the morrow’s work.” But sleep had departed from their eyes. Peter ventured to request of his Master that “I have just a little private talk with you. Not that I would have secrets from my brethren, but I have a troubled spirit, and if, perchance, I should deserve a rebuke from my Master, I could the better endure it alone with you.” And Jesus said, “Come with me, Peter”—leading the way into the house. When Peter returned from the presence of his Master much cheered and greatly encouraged, James decided to go in to talk with Jesus. And so on through the early hours of the morning, the other apostles went in one by one to talk with the Master. When they had all held personal conferences with him save the twins, who had fallen asleep, Andrew went in to Jesus and said: “Master, the twins have fallen asleep in the garden by the fire; shall I arouse them to inquire if they would also talk with you?” And Jesus smilingly said to Andrew, “They do well—trouble them not.” And now the night was passing; the light of another day was dawning.

7. THE WEEK FOLLOWING THE ORDINATION

140:7.1 After a few hours' sleep, when the twelve were assembled for a late breakfast with Jesus, he said: "Now must you begin your work of preaching the glad tidings and instructing believers. Make ready to go to Jerusalem." After Jesus had spoken, Thomas mustered up courage to say: "I know, Master, that we should now be ready to enter upon the work, but I fear we are not yet able to accomplish this great undertaking. Would you consent for us to stay hereabouts for just a few days more before we begin the work of the kingdom?" And when Jesus saw that all of his apostles were possessed by this same fear, he said: "It shall be as you have requested; we will remain here over the Sabbath day."

140:7.2 For weeks and weeks small groups of earnest truth seekers, together with curious spectators, had been coming to Bethsaida to see Jesus. Already word about him had spread over the countryside; inquiring groups had come from cities as far away as Tyre, Sidon, Damascus, Caesarea, and Jerusalem. Heretofore, Jesus had greeted these people and taught them concerning the kingdom, but the Master now turned this work over to the twelve. Andrew would select one of the apostles and assign him to a group of visitors, and sometimes all twelve of them were so engaged.

140:7.3 For two days they worked, teaching by day and holding private conferences late into the night. On the third day Jesus visited with Zebedee and Salome while he sent his apostles off to “go fishing, seek carefree change, or perchance visit your families.” On Thursday they returned for three more days of teaching.

140:7.4 During this week of rehearsing, Jesus many times repeated to his apostles the two great motives of his post-baptismal mission on earth:

140:7.5 1. To reveal the Father to man.

140:7.6 2. To lead men to become son-conscious—to faith-realize that they are the children of the Most High.

140:7.7 One week of this varied experience did much for the twelve; some even became over self-confident. At the last conference, the night after the Sabbath, Peter and James came to Jesus, saying, “We are ready—let us now go forth to take the kingdom.” To which Jesus replied, “May your wisdom equal your zeal and your courage atone for your ignorance.”

140:7.8 Though the apostles failed to comprehend much of his teaching, they did not fail to grasp the significance of the charmingly beautiful life he lived with them.

8. THURSDAY AFTERNOON ON THE LAKE

140:8.1 Jesus well knew that his apostles were not fully assimilating his teachings. He decided to give some special instruction to Peter, James, and John, hoping they would be able to clarify the ideas of their associates. He saw that, while some features of the idea of a spiritual kingdom were being grasped by the twelve, they steadfastly persisted in attaching these new spiritual teachings directly onto their old and entrenched literal concepts of the kingdom of heaven as a restoration of David's throne and the re-establishment of Israel as a temporal power on earth. Accordingly, on Thursday afternoon Jesus went out from the shore in a boat with Peter, James, and John to talk over the affairs of the kingdom. This was a four hours' teaching conference, embracing scores of questions and answers, and may most profitably be put in this record by reorganizing the summary of this momentous afternoon as it was given by Simon Peter to his brother, Andrew, the following morning:

140:8.2 1. Doing the Father's will.

IX: TRUST IN GOD'S PROVIDENCE
(Scott 66)

Jesus' teaching to trust in the overcare of the heavenly Father was not

Nothing in the teaching of Jesus has so often been called in question as this conception of providence. His ethic, it is held, involves a fatalism, a passive submission to circumstance instead of valiant effort to conquer it (S 66).

a blind and passive fatalism.

[See 2 Thess. 3:10 and UB 69:2.5.]

It is unnecessary for our present purpose to discuss the larger questions involved in these criticisms. They start from the assumption that the teaching of Jesus is in error because it is at odds with modern conditions; but there is always the possibility that the modern conditions are wrong (S 66).

But in any case the criticisms directed against this side of Jesus' thought are apt to neglect or misconstrue some essential facts. (1) For one thing, he does not forbid the exercise of prudence and foresight (S 67).

(2) Again, his warnings are directed not against reasonable care for the future but against anxiety (S 68).

(3) It must never be forgotten that when Jesus forbids anxiety about the future he addresses himself to his followers, who have taken the will of God as their sole law (S 68).

He quoted with approval, on this afternoon, an old Hebrew saying:

“He who will not work shall not eat.”

He pointed to his own experience as sufficient commentary on his teachings.

His precepts about trusting the Father must not be adjudged by the social or economic conditions of modern times or any other age.

His instruction embraces the ideal principles of living near God in all ages and on all worlds.

140:8.3 Jesus made clear to the three the difference between the requirements of apostleship and discipleship.

And even then he did not forbid the exercise of prudence and foresight by the twelve.

What he preached against was not forethought but anxiety, worry.

He taught the active and alert submission to God's will.

In answer to many of their questions regarding frugality and thriftiness, he simply called attention to his life as carpenter, boatmaker, and fisherman, and to his careful organization of the twelve.

He sought to make it clear that

But in the mind of Jesus there is always the thought of a divine power working along with us. The world is not an enemy that we must be afraid of and can only hope to master by the exercise of our own strength and cunning (S 70).

the world is not to be regarded as an enemy; that the circumstances of life constitute a divine dispensation working along with the children of God.

X: NON-RESISTANCE (Scott 71)

140:8.4 Jesus had great difficulty in getting them to understand his personal practice of nonresistance.

[His commandment to “resist not evil”] finds illustration in Jesus’ submission to injury at the Samaritan village, in his refusal to defend himself when arrested, in his silence before his accusers at the Trial (S 71).

He absolutely refused to defend himself, and it appeared to the apostles that he would be pleased if they would pursue the same policy.

He taught them not to resist evil, not to combat injustice or injury,

But against sayings and incidents of this kind we must set others of a quite opposite tenor.... His attitude was never that of a passive toleration of wrong (S 71-72).

but he did not teach passive tolerance of wrongdoing.

And he made it plain on this afternoon that

In a number of parables the punishment of evil-doers is noted with manifest approval (S 71).

It is not said that you must stand by when you see wrong inflicted on others, or that force must not be used in the necessary maintenance of law (S 72).

The context plainly shows that what he forbade was retaliation.

“Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth. But I say unto you that ye resist not evil, but whosoever shall smite thee on the cheek, turn to him the other also.” In other words, when wrong is done to your own person do not answer it with a similar wrong; endure the evil done to you and overcome it with good (S 72).

The world has gradually discovered that when once the right of private revenge is granted the door is thrown open to all kinds of evil and injustice (S 72).

he approved of the social punishment of evildoers and criminals, and that the civil government must sometimes employ force for the maintenance of social order and in the execution of justice.

140:8.5 He never ceased to warn his disciples against the evil practice of retaliation;

he made no allowance for revenge, the idea of getting even. He deplored the holding of grudges.

He disallowed the idea of an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth.

He discountenanced the whole concept of private and personal revenge, assigning these matters to civil government, on the one hand, and to the judgment of God, on the other.

He made it clear to the three that

The principle which Jesus enounces may perhaps be applied, as many Christian thinkers would now apply it, to the quarrels of classes and nations; but he does not make this wider reference. He confines himself to the case of the individual (S 73).

his teachings applied to the individual, not the state.

He summarized his instructions up to that time regarding these matters, as:

The rule of non-resistance cannot be taken as the central principle in Jesus' teaching, and may possibly be explained as little more than a prudential maxim. Nevertheless it connects itself in the closest manner with several of his fundamental ideas.

(1) It brings to the sharpest point his demand for human kindness. "Love your enemies; bless them that curse you; do good to them that hate you."

140:8.6 Love your enemies—

Your fellow-man has at all times a claim upon you. Even when he is in the act of doing you an injury, you have no right to injure him in return (S 73-74).

remember the moral claims of human brotherhood.

(2) It expresses the judgment of Jesus on the futility of evil.

140:8.7 The futility of evil:

He perceives that a wrong is not cancelled by avenging it, but has only been enlarged and perpetuated (S 74).

A wrong is not righted by vengeance.

It is more probable that the words "Resist not evil" (τῷ πονηρῷ) ought to read "Resist not the evil one"; and if so taken they acquire an emphatic meaning.... "Satan" means literally "the Adversary," "the Resister"; and Jesus would thus say "do not oppose the devil with his own weapons." By so doing you do not defeat him, but only accept his law and make him stronger (S 74).

Do not make the mistake of fighting evil with its own weapons.

140:8.8 Have faith—

[contd] (3) In this saying Jesus proclaims his confidence in the power of goodness... Non-resistance of evil has no meaning apart from this positive faith in the ultimate victory of good (S 74-75).

confidence in the eventual triumph of divine justice and eternal goodness.

140:8.9 2. Political attitude.

XI: THE POLITICAL ATTITUDE OF JESUS (Scott 76)

He cautioned his apostles to be discreet in their remarks concerning the strained relations then existing between the Jewish people and the Roman government; he forbade them to become in any way embroiled in these difficulties.

An attempt was made in the critical days at Jerusalem to force Jesus into a position that would compromise him either with the Jewish people or with the Roman administration. He avoided the snare, while at the same time he lifted the whole issue to a higher plane (S 76-77).

He was always careful to avoid the political snares of his enemies,

The one saying in which Jesus touches directly on the prerogative of the state is his famous answer about the tribute-money:

ever making reply,

“Render unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsar’s, and unto God the things that are God’s” (S 76).

“Render to Caesar the things which are Caesar’s and to God the things which are God’s.”

He refused to have his attention diverted from his mission of establishing a new way of salvation; he would not permit himself to be concerned about anything else.

In his own behavior Jesus was duly observant of all civic laws and ordinances (S 79).

In his personal life he was always duly observant of all civil laws and regulations;

His concern is always with the inward principles of man's life, not with the framework (S 81).

It was never the design of Jesus to reorganize the world's life according to a set scheme which should be complete in all its details and incapable of any change (S 81).

We cannot but admit, however, that if he had tried to do so his teaching would long ago have been emptied of value. It would have had relevance only to the time in which he lived, and in a later age, when conditions were entirely different, it would have cramped all natural growth and wrought nothing but mischief (S 81).

It was the strength of his teaching that he drew up no program, but only insisted on great principles and ideals, which could be worked out in many different ways. No generation can exempt itself from the labor of discovering for itself how they can best applied to its own conditions and needs (S 81-82).

There could be no greater disaster than to identify Christianity, as some would do, in all his public teachings he ignored the civic, social, and economic realms.

He told the three apostles that he was concerned only with the principles of man's inner and personal spiritual life.

140:8.10 Jesus was not, therefore, a political reformer.

He did not come to reorganize the world;

even if he had done this,

it would have been applicable only to that day and generation.

Nevertheless, he did show man the best way of living, and no generation is exempt from the labor of discovering how best to adapt Jesus' life to its own problems.

But never make the mistake of identifying Jesus' teachings with a political theory which happens to attract us for the time, and will finally go the way of every other (S 82).

with any political or economic theory, with any social or industrial system.

XII: MAN'S DUTY TO HIS NEIGHBOR (Scott 83)

The Law, to be sure, enjoined love to one's neighbor,—but "who is my neighbor?" This was a question warmly discussed in the Rabbinical schools, and it was answered, as time went on, in an ever narrower way (S 84).

The Jewish rabbis had long debated the question: Who is my neighbor?

[Jesus'] primary interest is not that of making the world better, for this will be accomplished by God Himself when He brings in the Kingdom, but that of fostering an active goodness in men and women (S 83).

Jesus came presenting the idea of active and spontaneous kindness, a love of one's fellow men so genuine that it expanded the neighborhood to include the whole world, thereby making all men one's neighbors.

But with all this, Jesus was interested only in the individual, not the mass.

Jesus was not a sociologist,

At the same time by insisting on our duty to those around us Jesus seeks to break down the selfish isolation in which men are wont to live (S 83).

but he did labor to break down all forms of selfish isolation.

It follows that the motive which Jesus always puts forward in his demand for brotherly kindness is that of compassion. Men are to help each other not from any calculation, or even from a sense of duty, but out of pure sympathy with their fellow-men (S 84).

He taught pure sympathy, compassion.

Michael of Nebadon is a mercy-dominated Son; compassion is his very nature.

“When thou makest a dinner or a supper, call not thy friends nor thy brethren nor thy kinsfolk, nor thy rich neighbors; but when thou makest a feast call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind” (S 85).

It is indeed assumed in various parables that wicked servants must be punished, that men who act fraudulently or slothfully must take the consequences. But the motive of justice undoubtedly tends to fall into the background; and this has always been felt to be one of the chief difficulties of the Christian ethic.

[See 2:3.2.]

From the outset the church was troubled with parasites,—often worthless characters or rank impostors, whom in obedience to Jesus it deemed itself obliged to tolerate. In all times since the law of Christian kindness has been hard to reconcile with that of ordinary justice (S 85).

His attitude is doubtless to be explained in large measure from his profound sense that justice is the prerogative of God. “Judge not that ye be not judged” (S 86).

140:8.12 The Master did not say that men should never entertain their friends at meat, but he did say that his followers should make feasts for the poor and the unfortunate.

Jesus had a firm sense of justice, but it was always tempered with mercy.

He did not teach his apostles that they were to be imposed upon by social parasites or professional alms-seekers.

The nearest he came to making sociological pronouncements was to say,

“Judge not, that you be not judged.”

140:8.13 He made it clear that

Indiscriminate kindness may be blamed for many evils, but infinitely more harm has been wrought by man's blundering efforts to do justice (S 86).

indiscriminate kindness may be blamed for many social evils.

The following day Jesus definitely instructed Judas that no apostolic funds were to be given out as alms except upon his request or upon the joint petition of two of the apostles.

In all these matters it was the practice of Jesus always to say,

When he sent forth his disciples on their mission his warning was, "Be ye wise as serpents and harmless as doves." What he desired was not an indolent good-nature, willing to be imposed on by anybody, but a royal generosity (S 87).

"Be as wise as serpents but as harmless as doves."

It seemed to be his purpose in all social situations to teach patience, tolerance,

It is significant that the only social obligation which is touched on in the Lord's prayer is this one of forgiveness (S 87).

XIV: THE FAMILY (Scott 95)

140:8.14 The family occupied the very center of Jesus' philosophy of life—here and hereafter.

His conception of God in His relation to men is determined by what he knows of earthly fatherhood (S 95).

He based his teachings about God on the family,

At the same time he appears, in several directions, to qualify the current estimate of the family. In the excessive reverence which was commonly paid to it he sees a danger to the higher religious interests, and is anxious, while maintaining all that is beautiful and helpful in it, to keep it in a subordinate place.

(1) For one thing, he desires us to think of it as one of the institutions which belong to the present age.

It is necessary for the right ordering of life under the existing conditions that there should be these groups, marked off from each other; but in the kingdom of God the family divisions, like all others, will be done away (S 96).

(2) It is further declared that even in the present the family has a secondary value. To do God's will is the supreme end, and in so far as we are distracted from it by domestic ties they must be sacrificed. Jesus himself gave up his home when he undertook his mission (S 96-97).

The aim of Jesus was to make men sensible of their larger brotherhood (S 97).

[Jesus] spoke at a time when divorce was scandalously easy, and when the existing law placed tyrannical power in the hands of the man against the woman (S 101).
[Note: See 167:5.2-5.]

while he sought to correct the Jewish tendency to overhonor ancestors.

He exalted family life as the highest human duty but made it plain that family relationships must not interfere with religious obligations.

He called attention to the fact that the family is a temporal institution; that it does not survive death.

Jesus did not hesitate to give up his family when the family ran counter to the Father's will.

He taught the new and larger brotherhood of man—the sons of God.

In Jesus' time divorce practices were lax in Palestine and throughout the Roman Empire.

In a more direct and practical way, by his correction of the law of divorce [by declaring the insolubility of marriage], Jesus raised the position of the family. That he made such a correction is one of the most certain facts about his teaching; for on this point we have the testimony not only of a number of Synoptic passages, but of one of the few quotations by Paul of a “word of the Lord.” The pronouncement on divorce is notable as the one exception to the rule that Jesus did not lay down laws but only guiding principles (S 98).

He repeatedly refused to lay down laws regarding marriage and divorce, but many of Jesus’ early followers had strong opinions on divorce and did not hesitate to attribute them to him.

All of the New Testament writers held to these more stringent and advanced ideas about divorce

The attempt to mitigate the rule of divorce is most clearly evident in Matthew, who twice insists on the saving clause “except on the ground of adultery” (Mt. 5:31,32 cf. Mt. 9:9)...

In Mark (10:11,12) divorce is forbidden absolutely (S 99-100).

except John Mark.

XIII: POSSESSIONS (Scott 89)

Jesus worked, lived, and traded in the world as he found it.

[contd] Not a few of Jesus’ best-known sayings are on the subject of wealth, and on this ground it has often been held that he aimed at an economic change.

He was not an economic reformer,

A man of the people, he was indignant at the injustice which had gathered all capital into the hands of a few, and was bent on a more equitable distribution (S 89).

But he did not offer any suggestions by way of remedy. He made it plain to the three that, while his apostles were not to hold property, he was not preaching against wealth and property, merely its unequal and unfair distribution.

Again and again in the course of Christian history there have been popular outbreaks against the wealth-holding classes in which appeal was made to the plain words of Jesus. In the deeper sense this appeal has been a legitimate one, for social justice belongs to the very essence of his demand (S 89).

He recognized the need for social justice and industrial fairness, but he offered no rules for their attainment.

Believing as he did that the new age was just at hand, he called on men to break with the present world. Not only must they undergo an inward change, conforming their will to that will of God which will hereafter prevail, but they must rid themselves of earthly possessions (S 90).

140:8.16 He never taught his followers to avoid earthly possessions, only his twelve apostles.

It is further to be observed that Luke, to whom we owe most of the recorded sayings on the subject of wealth, is strongly biased. Alike in his Gospel and in the book of Acts he takes frequent occasion to extol poverty as a Christian virtue,

Luke, the physician, was a strong believer in social equality,

and he did much to interpret Jesus' sayings in harmony with his personal beliefs.

Jesus never personally directed his followers to adopt a communal mode of life; he made no pronouncement of any sort regarding such matters.

140:8.17 Jesus frequently warned his listeners against covetousness, declaring that

We have seen, however, that [Jesus] never allows himself to be warped from his own convictions by apocalyptic ideas.... When he says, for instance, "A man's life consists not in the abundance of the things which he possesses," he is not thinking of the coming age, when the treasures of this world will become worthless. He reminds us that even now we must learn to distinguish between that which is accidental and that which is essential (S 91).

"a man's happiness consists not in the abundance of his material possessions."

It profits a man nothing to gain the world and lose the soul (S 92).

He constantly reiterated,

"What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

He made no direct attack on the possession of property, but he did insist that it is eternally essential that

In his later teachings he sought to correct many erroneous Urantia views of life by narrating

Unlike many religious teachers who have affected a disdainful attitude to the merely material interests he recognizes that for ordinary men life must largely revolve around problems of money, and he faces the fact honestly. This element of his teaching is particularly marked in the parables, where he reveals his attitude to life more freely and unconsciously than in his more formal utterances (S 92).

He never intended to formulate an economic theory, and if he had done so, in a world so different from ours, it would now be completely out of date (S 93).

It is true that he does not deal directly with those questions of social justice which now perplex us, and certainly he takes no side in our modern economic quarrels (S 93-94).

numerous parables which he presented in the course of his public ministry.

Jesus never intended to formulate economic theories;

he well knew that each age must evolve its own remedies for existing troubles.

And if Jesus were on earth today, living his life in the flesh, he would be a great disappointment to the majority of good men and women for the simple reason that he would not take sides in present-day political, social, or economic disputes.

He would remain grandly aloof while teaching you how to perfect your inner spiritual life so as to render you manifold more competent to attack the solution of your purely human problems.

140:8.18 Jesus would make all men Godlike and then stand by sympathetically while these sons of God solve their own political, social, and economic problems. It was not wealth that he denounced, but what wealth does to the majority of its devotees.

[See Acts 20:35.]

On this Thursday afternoon Jesus first told his associates that “it is more blessed to give than to receive.”

140:8.19 5. Personal religion.

II: OLD AND NEW IN THE ETHIC OF JESUS (Scott 12)

(7) Finally, by his own character and example Jesus gave reality to the moral ideal.... All that he taught was exemplified in himself, so that he stands out forever as the manifestation of the higher life (S 21).

You, as did his apostles, should the better understand Jesus’ teachings by his life. He lived a perfected life on Urantia, and his unique teachings can only be understood when that life is visualized in its immediate background.

It is his life, and not his lessons to the twelve or his sermons to the multitudes, that will assist most in revealing the Father’s divine character and loving personality.

XV: PERSONAL VIRTUES (Scott 102)

He requires that men should aim at certain excellences, not because they owe a duty to themselves as men, but as a necessary part of their service to God. His attitude in this respect may be contrasted with that of the Greek moralists, who set out from the conception of man as the artist of his own life (S 102).

140:8.20 Jesus did not attack the teachings of the Hebrew prophets or the Greek moralists.

The Master recognized the many good things which these great teachers stood for, but he had come down to earth to teach something additional,

For Jesus, the task imposed on man is to conform his will to the will of God.

The aim, apparently, is not so much to produce a full-rounded human being as a religious man, and at some periods, most notably in the Middle Ages, this preoccupation with one aspect of man's nature has proved harmful (S 102-03).

The mediæval saints who most attract us are those whose piety was touched with human passions, and even with human failings. It is not merely that they are thus drawn within our range of sympathy, but we feel that they were actually larger men, richer and more potent characters, because the religious interest did not engross them wholly (S 103).

[Jesus] often speaks of humility as the distinctive mark of his followers, and the stress he lays on it has tended to warp our conception of his whole teaching (S 103).

It should be noted, too, that his regard for [humility] was only the other side of a lofty self-respect (S 104).

a mortal wholly occupied with religious feelings and actuated only by spiritual impulses.

Could you have had but one look at him, you would have known that Jesus was a real man of great experience in the things of this world.

The teachings of Jesus in this respect have been grossly perverted and much misrepresented all down through the centuries of the Christian era; you have also held perverted ideas about

What he aimed at in his life appears to have been a superb self-respect.

Is it not more honorable, he asks, to humble yourself that you may be exalted? (S 104)

He only advised man to humble himself that he might become truly exalted;

The humility which Jesus demands is humility towards God (S 104).

what he really aimed at was true humility toward God.

(2) Along with humility the disciples are to practice a complete sincerity (S 105).

He placed great value upon sincerity—

Sincerity, as Jesus conceives it, implies that all thoughts and motives can fully bear the light. This is the meaning of the Beatitude “Blessed are the pure in heart,” with its reminiscence of the Psalm which declares that only the upright man may appear before God in His temple (S 105).

a pure heart.

(3) In many sayings, and in several of the most impressive parables, Jesus insists on the need of fidelity (S 105).

Fidelity was a cardinal virtue in his estimate of character,

(4) It is often objected that in his emphasis on humility and kindness Jesus left out of account the virtue of courage, which the pagan moralists rightly perceived to be fundamental. This, however, is a strange misunderstanding of the whole drift of his teaching; for in the Gospels, no less than in pagan ethics, a primary place is given to courage (S 106).

while courage was the very heart of his teachings.

It would hardly be too much to say that the very watchword of his gospel is “fear not.”

“Fear not” was his watchword,

and patient endurance his ideal of strength of character.

Now there can certainly be no question that war in itself is the negation of the Christian idea of brotherhood, but in the stubbornness with which war is waged, when once it breaks out among Christian nations, there is no inconsistency. For Christianity is essentially a religion of courage (S 107).

It is remarkable that about the grosser sensual vices he says little (S 109).

[His] comparative silence on the grosser vices is chiefly to be explained from the positiveness which is the unfailing note in his teaching (S 110).

He was conscious that all effort to suppress the sensual appetites by rebuke and prohibition was ineffectual (S 110).

In this conviction that the real sins are those of the will, Jesus denounces pride and arrogance (S 111).

One vice which Jesus repeatedly denounces is that of cruelty.

The teachings of Jesus constitute a religion of valor, courage, and heroism.

And this is just why he chose as his personal representatives twelve commonplace men, the majority of whom were rugged, virile, and manly fishermen.

140:8.21 Jesus had little to say about the social vices of his day; seldom did he make reference to moral delinquency.

He was a positive teacher of true virtue.

He studiously avoided the negative method of imparting instruction; he refused to advertise evil. He was not even a moral reformer.

He well knew, and so taught his apostles, that the sensual urges of mankind are not suppressed by either religious rebuke or legal prohibitions.

His few denunciations were largely directed against pride,

Believing as he does that love is the supreme duty he revolts with his whole soul against all forms of oppression—against the exploitation of the weak by the strong (S 111-12).

[Compare: There is reason for the protest ... that he did the Pharisees an injustice when he held them up as the typical examples of pride, hypocrisy, oppression (S 113).]

The denunciations are mostly directed against the scribes and Pharisees,—the religious leaders who had set themselves in opposition to the message of the Kingdom (S 112).

He represents them as morally worthless men, while it is certain that many if not most of them were honestly striving, according to their lights, to follow the higher life (S 112).

XVI: THE NEW TYPE OF CHARACTER (Scott 114)

His real object was to create in men a new and better will. “First make the tree good” (S 114).

Jesus, therefore, is not primarily concerned with the separate virtues which mark the good life (S 114).

and hypocrisy.

140:8.22 Jesus did not vehemently denounce even the Pharisees, as did John.

He knew many of the scribes and Pharisees were honest of heart;

he understood their enslaving bondage to religious traditions.

Jesus laid great emphasis on “first making the tree good.”

He impressed the three that he valued the whole life, not just a certain few special virtues.

140:8.23 The one thing which John gained from this day’s teaching was that the heart of Jesus’ religion consisted in

His disciples are to be known not from their possession of this attribute or that, but from their character as a whole. They look on the world with a new mind. They encounter the problems of life in a moral temper which is different from that of other men. It was this type of character which Jesus tried to form in his disciples, and of which he was himself the great example (S 114).

Sharing in man's ordinary life he lived it from a new center, and in doing so made a fresh beginning in the career of humanity.

Paul sought to express this truth when he described Jesus as the second Adam (S 115).

VIII: THE SOCIAL AND PERSONAL MOTIVES (Scott 56)

That the teaching of Jesus was profoundly social there can be no question. The Kingdom was inseparable in his mind from the community that should inherit it, and though he thought of it as future he desired that men should live already as if it were come, and so deal with their fellow-men (S 57).

the acquirement of a compassionate character coupled with a personality motivated to do the will of the Father in heaven.

140:8.24 Peter grasped the idea that the gospel they were about to proclaim was really a fresh beginning for the whole human race.

He conveyed this impression subsequently to Paul, who formulated therefrom his doctrine of Christ as "the second Adam."

140:8.25 James grasped the thrilling truth that Jesus wanted his children on earth to live as though they were already citizens of the completed heavenly kingdom.

XVI: THE NEW TYPE OF CHARACTER (Scott 114)

It does not follow that he aimed at molding all men after one uniform pattern. The idea has too often prevailed in the church, and has worked infinite mischief, that since the Christian is a new man he must divest himself of everything that belonged to his old nature. Jesus never failed to recognize that men are all made differently, and cannot be forced to adapt themselves to one given standard.

140:8.26 Jesus knew men were different, and he so taught his apostles.

He constantly exhorted them to refrain from trying to mold the disciples and believers according to some set pattern.

He sought to allow each soul to develop in its own way, a perfecting and separate individual before God.

In answer to one of Peter's many questions, the Master said:

While he lives for the present age a man is enslaved by its conventions and prejudices, and is in no way different from the millions of other men. But when he seeks the Kingdom, making it his one desire to do the will of God, he is set free.

"I want to set men free

He can start afresh, as if from childhood, and can unfold the true possibilities of his nature (S 117).

so that they can start out afresh as little children upon the new and better life."

Ever and again he insists that the true goodness must be unconscious (S 117).

Jesus always insisted that true goodness must be unconscious,

140:8.27 The three apostles were shocked this afternoon when they realized that their Master's religion made no provision for spiritual self-examination.

We have here one of the outstanding differences of the ethic of Jesus not only from that of antiquity, but from that which has usually passed as Christian. The Christian moralists, almost from the outset, have laid stress on the duty of self-examination. They have thought of the true disciple as engaged day by day in shaping for himself a character which will approximate ever more nearly to his ideal.

All religions before and after the times of Jesus, even Christianity, carefully provide for conscientious self-examination.

But not so with the religion of Jesus of Nazareth.

But Jesus himself never speaks of this "character-building." He makes no demand for introspection, and attaches little value to the goodness which is the product of a set design.

Jesus' philosophy of life is without religious introspection.

The carpenter's son never taught character building;

What he requires is not a process of building but of growth (S 117-18).

he taught character growth,

declaring that the kingdom of heaven is like a mustard seed.

But Jesus said nothing which would proscribe self-analysis as a prevention of conceited egotism.

If the true goodness can only be attained apart from one's own effort, must we not conclude that God Himself has chosen whom He would, and endowed them with the needful grace? Yet it is certain that this fatalism was not in the mind of Jesus. He always speaks of the right to enter the Kingdom as one that every man must win for himself by struggle and sacrifice.

The cost of remaining in the progressive ascent of the kingdom

It is the pearl of great price which cannot be secured unless all else is given in return for it; and Jesus laments that so few are equal to the great renunciation (S 118).

is the pearl of great price, in order to possess which a man sells all that he has.

XVII: PERMANENT VALIDITY (Scott 120)

140:8.29 The teaching of Jesus is a religion for everybody,

[contd] There is hardly an element in the message of Jesus which has not at one time or another been called in question.... It was argued, for instance, in ancient times that the Christian ethic was fitted only for weaklings and slaves, while in our day it is often condemned as a bourgeois morality, which leaves the toiling masses out of account (S 120).

Nothing has so hindered the progress of the race as the crystallizing of ordinances which in their own time were salutary (S 120).

His religion never became crystallized (during his day) into creeds and theological laws;

he left not a line of writing behind him.

[See 140:10.3, below.]

His life and teachings were bequeathed the universe as an inspirational and idealistic inheritance suitable for the spiritual guidance and moral instruction of all ages on all worlds.

And even today, Jesus' teaching stands apart from all religions, as such, albeit it is the living hope of every one of them.

Granting that morality must rest on religion, and that the religion of Jesus is likely to be permanent, must we not admit that religion, though it is the highest interest, is not the only interest in life? Jesus appears to think of the attainment of the Kingdom as man's one task, and allows no place to any activity by which it is not in some way furthered (S 122).

140:8.30 Jesus did not teach his apostles that religion is man's only earthly pursuit; that was the Jewish idea of serving God.

But he did insist that religion was the exclusive business of the twelve.

Neither does he touch on the many difficult problems which are incident to the pursuit of culture (S 122).

Jesus taught nothing to deter his believers from the pursuit of genuine culture;

he only detracted from the tradition-bound religious schools of Jerusalem.

He was liberal, bighearted, learned, and tolerant.

What offends us in a certain type of Christian is not religion but a self-conscious pietism; and it was this very thing which offended Jesus also (S 123).

Self-conscious piety had no place in his philosophy of righteous living.

(1) On the one hand, he never professed to offer definite solutions for all the problems of his own age, much less for those which would emerge in the future. He was content, as we have seen, to set forth the great principles which must determine moral action, and which must hold good in all times and circumstances (S 124).

(2) On the other hand, it was part of his intention that men should ponder for themselves how his rule of life should be carried into practice.... He wished to develop their own powers of insight and initiative (S 124-25).

In what sense, then, may it be affirmed that the ethic of Jesus has a permanent validity? (S 125)

(2) Again,—and this is the reason why his teaching has proved so vital,—Jesus concerned himself with the underlying, permanent needs of human life (S 126-27).

(3) ... He called for absolute sincerity in word and deed, for a love that toils and endures without limit, for a goodness which is perfect like that of God (S 127).

His ethic can lose its authority only on the one condition that love, truth, goodness, should some day cease to be regarded as the highest ideals (S 128).

(5) Above all, his aim was to create in his followers a new will; and it is this which affords us the certainty that his ethic will never be superseded (S 128-29).

140:8.31 The Master offered no solutions for the nonreligious problems of his own age nor for any subsequent age.

Jesus wished to develop spiritual insight into eternal realities and to stimulate initiative in the originality of living;

he concerned himself exclusively with the underlying and permanent spiritual needs of the human race.

He revealed

a goodness equal to God.

He exalted love—truth, beauty, and goodness—as the divine ideal and the eternal reality.

140:8.32 The Master came to create in man a new spirit, a new will—

His purpose was to impart to men a new moral ardor, a capacity for knowing and choosing the right, a will in harmony with the divine will (S 129).

to impart a new capacity for knowing the truth, experiencing compassion,

and choosing goodness—

the will to be in harmony with God's will, coupled with the eternal urge to become perfect, even as the Father in heaven is perfect.

9 . THE DAY OF CONSECRATION

140:9.1 The next Sabbath day Jesus devoted to his apostles, journeying back to the highland where he had ordained them; and there, after a long and beautifully touching personal message of encouragement, he engaged in the solemn act of the consecration of the twelve. This Sabbath afternoon Jesus assembled the apostles around him on the hillside and gave them into the hands of his heavenly Father in preparation for the day when he would be compelled to leave them alone in the world. There was no new teaching on this occasion, just visiting and communion.

140:9.2 Jesus reviewed many features of the ordination sermon, delivered on this same spot, and then, calling them before him one by one, he commissioned them to go forth in the world as his representatives.

XVIII: THE THIRD PREACHING
TOUR. (A Harmony of the Gospels 93)

§64. THE MISSION OF THE TWELVE.
Matt. 9:36—11:1. Mark 6:7-13. Luke 9:1-6.

Matt. 10:5 These twelve Jesus sent forth, and charged them, saying,

Go not into any way of the Gentiles, and enter not into any city of the Samaritans: 6 but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

7 And as ye go, preach, saying, The Kingdom of heaven is at hand.

8 Heal the sick, raise the dead, cleanse the lepers, cast out devils: [See 140:3.2, above.] freely ye received, freely give.

9 Get you no gold, nor silver, nor brass in your purses; 10 no wallet for your journey, neither two coats, nor shoes, nor staff: for the labourer is worthy of his food.

[... for the labourer is worthy of his hire (Luke 10:[7]).]

16 Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves:

be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves.

Mark 13:[9] But take ye heed to yourselves:

Matt. 10:17 But beware of men: for they will deliver you up to councils,

The Master's consecration charge was:

“Go into all the world and preach the glad tidings of the kingdom.

Liberate spiritual captives, comfort the oppressed, and minister to the afflicted.

Freely you have received, freely give.”

140:9.3 Jesus advised them to take neither money nor extra clothing, saying, “The laborer is worthy of his hire.”

And finally he said:

“Behold I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves;

be you therefore as wise as serpents and as harmless as doves.

But take heed,

for your enemies will bring you up before their councils,

and in their synagogues they will scourge you;

18 yea and before governors and kings shall ye be brought for my sake, for a testimony to them and to the Gentiles.

19 But when they deliver you up, be not anxious how or what ye shall speak: for it shall be given you in that hour what ye shall speak.

20 For it is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father that speaketh in you.

[Luke 21:16 But ye shall be delivered up even by parents, and brethren, and kinsfolk, and friends; and some of you shall they cause to be put to death.]

22 And ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake: but he that endureth to the end, the same shall be saved.

while in their synagogues they will castigate you.

Before governors and rulers you will be brought because you believe this gospel, and your very testimony shall be a witness for me to them.

And when they lead you to judgment, be not anxious about what you shall say, for the spirit of my Father indwells you and will at such a time speak through you.

Some of you will be put to death, and before you establish the kingdom on earth,

you will be hated by many peoples because of this gospel;

but fear not; I will be with you, and my spirit shall go before you into all the world.

And my Father's presence will abide with you while you go first to the Jews, then to the gentiles."

140:9.4 And when they came down from the mountain, they journeyed back to their home in Zebedee's house.

10. THE EVENING AFTER THE CONSECRATION

140:10.1 That evening while teaching in the house, for it had begun to rain, Jesus talked at great length,

VI: THE IDEAL OF RIGHTEOUSNESS (Fiske & Easton 31)

Jesus gives principles of conduct. He does not prescribe rules, he describes a character; he is interested in showing his disciples what they must be, rather than what they must do (F&E 34-35).

They knew only a religion that imposed the doing of certain things as the means of attaining righteousness—salvation. But Jesus would reiterate, “In the kingdom you must be righteous in order to do the work.” Many times did he repeat,

The official teachers could be content if persuaded that they had fulfilled the rules; he asks for that “divine discontent” which strives for perfection and can never be satisfied until it has been attained. “Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father is perfect” (F&E 35).

“Be you therefore perfect, even as your Father in heaven is perfect.”

All the while was the Master explaining to his bewildered apostles that the salvation which he had come to bring to the world was to be had only by believing, by simple and sincere faith. Said Jesus: “John preached a baptism of repentance, sorrow for the old way of living. You are to proclaim the baptism of fellowship with God. Preach repentance to those who stand in need of such teaching, but to those already seeking sincere entrance to the kingdom, open the doors wide and bid them enter into the joyous fellowship of the sons of God.”

But it was a difficult task to persuade these Galilean fishermen that, in the kingdom, being righteous, by faith, must precede doing righteousness in the daily life of the mortals of earth.

140:10.2 Another great handicap in this work of teaching the twelve was their tendency to

We have no enunciation of legal commands, we have the setting forth of principles; if we take Jesus' words take highly idealistic and spiritual principles of religious truth

Jesus would present to them the beautiful spirit of the soul's attitude, but they insisted on translating such teachings into rules of personal behavior.

Many times, when they did make sure to remember what the Master said, they were almost certain to forget

Here, again, we must mark attentively what Jesus does not say. He does not say, "If a man smite a child on its right cheek, let him smite the child on the other cheek also!" ... When we try to word his principle legalistically in such forms as these, we realize instantly the absurdity of our interpretation of the teaching as precepts (F&K 39-40).

But they slowly assimilated his teaching because

And, then, marvel of marvels: he was all that he taught (F&E 41).

Jesus was all that he taught.

What they could not gain from his verbal instruction, they gradually acquired by living with him.

140:10.3 It was not apparent to the apostles that

[You are bestowing this life of mortal incarnation upon Urantia, but you are to live such a life for the spiritual inspiration of every human and superhuman intelligence that has lived, now exists, or may yet live on every inhabited world which has formed, now forms, or may yet form a part of the vast galaxy of your administrative domain.

their Master was engaged in living a life of spiritual inspiration for every person of every age on every world of a far-flung universe.

Notwithstanding what Jesus told them from time to time, the apostles did not grasp the idea that he was doing a work on this world but for all other worlds in his vast creation.

Your earth life in the likeness of mortal flesh shall not be so lived as to constitute an example for the mortals of Urantia in the days of your earthly sojourn nor for any subsequent generation of human beings on Urantia or on any other world.

Jesus lived his earth life on Urantia, not to set a personal example of mortal living for the men and women of this world,

Rather shall your life in the flesh on Urantia be the inspiration for all lives upon all Nebadon worlds throughout all generations in the ages to come (120:2.7).]

but rather to create a high spiritual and inspirational ideal for all mortal beings on all worlds.

VIII: THE HEART OF THE GOSPEL (Fiske & Easton 51)

140:10.4 This same evening Thomas asked Jesus:

“Master, you say that

we must become as little children before we can gain entrance to the Father’s kingdom,

Just what does “as a little child” mean? (F&E 52).

The quality that makes a child attractive is something everyone knows, even though it is perhaps difficult to state in a precise formula. Generally speaking, however, we may sum up this quality as “affectionate naturalness.”

There is no bargaining in the child-father relationship (F&E 53).

II: OLD AND NEW IN THE ETHIC OF JESUS (Scott 12)

What was it that marked the ethical teaching of Jesus as in the truest sense original? (L 17)

(2) Again, morality for Jesus springs out of a new relation to God (L 18).

(3) A new emphasis is laid on the value of the individual soul.

and yet you have warned us not to be deceived by false prophets nor to become guilty of casting our pearls before swine.

Now, I am honestly puzzled. I cannot understand your teaching.”

Jesus replied to Thomas: “How long shall I bear with you! Ever you insist on making literal all that I teach.

There is present that natural affection between every normal child and its father which insures an understanding and loving relationship, and which forever precludes all disposition to bargain for the Father’s love and mercy.

And the gospel you are going forth to preach has to do with a salvation growing out of the faith-realization of this very and eternal child-father relationship.”

140:10.5 The one characteristic of Jesus’ teaching was that the morality of his philosophy originated in the personal relation of the individual to God—this very child-father relationship.

Jesus placed emphasis on the individual,

In Hebrew thought it is the nation which is the object of God's favor, and while the later prophets allow a place to individuals they are still concerned only with Israelites (L 18-19).

not on the race or nation.

(4) The moral quality of an act is made to consist in the thought or intention that lies behind it (L 19).

While eating supper, Jesus had the talk with Matthew in which he explained that the morality of any act is determined by the individual's motive.

(5) The ethic of Jesus is positive in its demand. This is pointedly illustrated in the Golden Rule, which is found in the literature of various ancient peoples, but always in the negative form: "Do not to others what you would not have them do to you" (L 20).

Jesus' morality was always positive.

VII: THE CHRISTIAN ETHIC (Fiske & Easton 43)

The negative Golden Rule can be perfectly fulfilled in solitude; the positive Golden Rule demands social contacts (F&E 44).

The golden rule as restated by Jesus demands active social contact; the older negative rule could be obeyed in isolation.

II: OLD AND NEW IN THE ETHIC OF JESUS (Scott 12)

(6) Morality is purified of all extraneous and accidental elements. Jesus himself was "born under the Law," and there is no indication that he consciously broke with it. Yet he draws a clear distinction between the essential commandments and those ordinances of ritual and custom with which they were entangled in the practice of the time.

Jesus stripped morality of all rules and ceremonies

By doing so he lifted the spiritual life of the race to a new level (L 20).

140:10.6 This new religion of Jesus was not without its practical implications, but whatever of practical political, social, or economic value there is to be found in his teaching is the natural outworking of this inner experience of the soul as it manifests the fruits of the spirit in the spontaneous daily ministry of genuine personal religious experience.

140:10.7 After Jesus and Matthew had finished talking, Simon Zelotes asked, “But, Master, are all men the sons of God?” And Jesus answered: “Yes, Simon, all men are the sons of God, and that is the good news you are going to proclaim.” But the apostles could not grasp such a doctrine; it was a new, strange, and startling announcement. And it was because of his desire to impress this truth upon them that Jesus taught his followers to treat all men as their brothers.

V: THE RELIGIOUS BASIS (Scott 37)

140:10.8 In response to a question asked by Andrew, the Master made it clear that Indeed, the more we examine his thought the more we become aware that the moral and religious elements can at no point be separated (S 38).

the morality of his teaching was inseparable from the religion of his living.

He does not argue, like the philosophical moralists, from the constitution of man’s nature and the obligations laid on him as a social being, but stakes everything on postulates of faith (S 38).

He taught morality, not from the nature of man,

For Jesus the one thing necessary was a right relation to God,—a complete harmony of our will with the divine will (S 40).

but from the relation of man to God.

140:10.9 John asked Jesus, “Master, what is the kingdom of heaven?” And Jesus answered: “The kingdom of heaven consists in these three essentials:

[Just as science is built up on the assumption that there are certain unalterable laws to which all things must conform, so religion springs from the faith in the sovereignty of God (S 50).]

first, recognition of the fact of the sovereignty of God;

second, belief in the truth of sonship with God; and third, faith in the effectiveness of the supreme human desire to do the will of God—to be like God.

And this is the good news of the gospel: that by faith every mortal may have all these essentials of salvation.”

140:10.10 And now the week of waiting was over, and they prepared to depart on the morrow for Jerusalem.

1. It was probably on one of those mountain-ranges, which stretch to the north of Capernaum, that Jesus had spent the night of lonely prayer, which preceded the designation of the twelve to the Apostolate (Edersheim 524).
2. Also quoted in 135:3.2 and 137:8.16.
3. “That,” said one of the disciples afterward, “was our ordination sermon!” (Poling 65)
4. They are called not to selfish ease but to devoted ministry, serving in an evil and dark world ... (Smith 121).
5. Matt. 5:3 Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.
6. 6 Blessed are they that hunger and thirst for righteousness: for they shall be filled.
7. 5 Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth.
8. 8 Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.
9. 4 Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted.
10. 7 Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy.

11. 9 Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called sons of God.
12. 10 Blessed are they that have been persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.
13. 11 Blessed are ye when men shall reproach you, and persecute you, and say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake.
14. 12 Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven: for so persecuted they the prophets that were before you.
